About:

Social sciences form a fundamental part of the knowledge bases that help us understand the world around us. Their importance lies not only in the wide range of topics they cover but also in the various methods they use to examine and analyze these complex subjects. Social sciences are characterized by their focus on humans as social beings who live within a complex network of relationships with others, interacting and being influenced by the surrounding society.

It can be said that the social nature of humans defines their human identity. To promote the exchange of knowledge and advanced discoveries in this field, social science conferences are organized, providing an ideal platform for researchers and experts to present their research and discuss current social challenges. Researchers, academics, university professors, and those interested in social and human studies are encouraged to participate in these conferences, which offer a unique opportunity to contribute new scientific ideas and insights that address contemporary needs arising from new issues in human societies.

These conferences create an interactive environment that helps develop specialized research teams. Social science conferences are highly significant events that bring together scholars and researchers from different parts of the world to discuss and exchange ideas and studies in various social science fields. Their goal is to shed light on contemporary social issues and analyze them using scientific methods, emphasizing their vital role in expanding the horizons of knowledge and advancing social progress.

In this context, Rimar Academy, announces its "First Conference on Humanities and Social Sciences," which will be held on February 22-23-24, 2025, in London, UK.

This scientific forum aims to bring together researchers, academics, and thinkers from various social and human science disciplines to exchange knowledge and experiences, discuss contemporary challenges, and explore future horizons in these vital scientific fields.
